On the show today We'll be talking about religious discrimination bills, some largely good news. I think you'd have to say for now, really good and Victoria, and sort of neutral. You might say, overall at a federal level, and if you want to join in that conversation or any, others might be some other updates that we get to and talk about an update on the situation mentioned, a few weeks ago, re Keilan and Andy Meddick and lots of ways to get in touch with this show, you can do so on out of the pan 855 at gmail.com SMS 6, 1 4, 5 6, 7 5, 1215 tweet at salgoldsaidso and that's the bottom line. Well, the news is the religious discrimination bills. Yeah. Yeah, let's get off to a good start and also and I'll start with that and then there's also something else. I want to mention in light of an email just gave me an idea just came in just after the show last week from our one of our resident, awesome listeners Mel. And but there's so these two threads going. Let's get this first one under way. Before we dive into the good news. Suppose. It's that time of the year where we start thinking towards end of year.

My goodness, we are probably thinking about it this year. I think there's a lot of people on a number of levels saying, thanks 2021. Just shut the door on your way out. As the old saying, goes Mel suggested last week after the show. Thank me for the show and said I should put in a request to interview. Chanel conus or Grace time. That would be a wonderful interview. I'd love to interview people like that, but it got me thinking about you know, who's been your person of the year now. I've obviously this show

Is about rainbows, flash, queer issues. So now that's great. But person doesn't have to be our tour. Identifiers rainbow /, queer, even if they are out, you know, we had my people who are out as heterosexual and or cisgender all that sort of thing. So just your person of 2021, and I got me thinking that I really was, you know, in a similar issue, note to Mel's mentions of Chanel and Grace. I would have to go for Brittany Higgins. I think her courage and steadfastness in.

Talking about her experiences. So well and the fact that she has given least some momentum, it would seem is a good vote. So sending your votes, by all the means of communication for your person of the years. Not I'm going to be the most scientific survey, I would hasten to add. But yeah, let's hear what you think but of course, so while that's going on, we'll talk about, let's sa first, the really good news. And that is it sort of got through Parliament in state of Victoria.

State parliament in a rush on Thursday into Friday. With some late, sitting out some system to a commercial station this morning where one reporter had to be there all night and do the proverbial cat naps when the debate was a bit quiet, but as well as the pandemic laws, which is an issue, perhaps Beyond this program, the ending of religious discrimination. Just the allowance of religious discrimination in a number of settings. Particularly schools. Got through the Victorian Parliament.

And so this is incredibly, welcome. Of course, from the point of view of a lot of LGBTIQ A+ people and we should acknowledge that Tasmania has had such laws for a very long time since 2005 and well done to them of course. And, you know, it seems that some of the, the people some archbishop's down there or something, had a bit of a hissy fit and did.

Like it, which was part of the reason for the federal law and that was proposed and we'll talk about in a second. But this Victorian law passing is very, very welcome. And now for the meantime, it, of course, will be in force, which is incredibly, welcome. And the reason I say in the meantime, I mean, I'll come to that linking it to the federal law in a second, but you can find out about this. Good news. Look at a web and

Email on Premier dot Vic dot gov dot you sorry immediate release. Well, it's all technology to this person who remembers telegrams and the answer is labor. Government has sent a strong message that there is no place for discrimination in Victorian schools and workplace with laws passed in Parliament on the 3rd of December and under the Equal Opportunity, religious exceptions Amendment act, religious organizations, and schools will no longer be able to sack or refuse to hire people based on protected attributes such as sexuality, gender identity, or marital.

It's and religious organizations and schools will only be able to make employment decisions based on where an employee's beliefs are inherent to the job such as a religious studies teacher or a principal. Now, let's just stop there. Stop quoting for a second. Why does the gardener need to be a Catholic in a Catholic school or Jewish in a Jewish school? And where does this end? I mean, let's say I'm a trans person who I have a job as a career and I turn up to the school to they then said well, we don't want you in here because you might influence the children. Yeah, well

Yes end. Yeah, make sure I'm not hired but if I'm a supplier or a contractor that sort of thing. So the bill recognizes the right of religious organizations and schools to continue to practice their faith, provide religious teaching and still their ethos. But the omnibus legislation will have an impact on how religious bodies select priests ministers religious leaders or their members perfectly fair. So the religious organizations that receive Victorian Government funding to provide services, will not be able to

To refuse to provide services based on sexual orientation, or gender identity and the this release. And I'm only quoting it quote previous protections to prevent discrimination against LGBT IQ. People were shamefully stripped back in 2011 by the former liberal government and were also blocked by the Liberals from being reinstated in 2016. So this now means that, you know, lgbti I'm going to say lgbtqa.

Plus teachers, there's a little lack of clarity on sex characteristics / intersects. So, but the thing is, you will be able to be out as a teacher or student, which will be enormous and, you know, sort of, I think be of great benefit. So well done to Victoria joining Tasmania, and let's hope other states and territories where these reforms are needed on the large island. If we can call the of course, at will follow suit.

So we move up north to Canberra, where the federal law of water. An interesting week. It has been there. And well, the religious discrimination bill has now been sent off to, to not just one. But, two enquiries then it's all a little, a little from my research thus far, A little, not quite 100% clear. So the bills it would seem that had the Movement tried to force the bills through and get an actual vote on accepting the bills in their status, that some moderate liberals would have voted against it. People like Trent Zimmerman Zimmerman and possibly Warren inch, possibly others. And that is worth noting. So there's now two inquiries, there's a for the religious discrimination Bill 2021 and related bills. The attorney general has referred.

Third to abjure parliamentary joint committee on human rights. The matters for inquiry and report by the 4th of February, 20 22, and they are referred to as the religious discrimination legislative package. This is on a pH dot gov dot EU parliamentary business committees joint / human rights, / religious discrimination. I took me a while to find it. I can tell you and the committee had resolved, it will carefully consider all correspondence received including from

Vigils, but in order to administrative Lee manage, the volume of correspondent to lonely, Publishers submissions, correspondence, from organizations and academics. The committee has developed an online survey to allow members of the public to express their views and that will close at 5:00 p.m. On the 21st of December 20, 21. So, you have 16 days to put your views. It now. I started looking through it this morning and make sure you get to the question where about if you oppose the bill or whether you don't whether you support.

It, the critical one is whether you support or oppose the bill in its current form because some of the questions are the sort of a bit could be considered a bit push polling. Let's go through it now. I'll put in some answers. Nope. It's gone back to where I left it this morning. So, starting at question 1, which is almost a logical thing to do. The questions are and I quote as we keep hitting previous live.

Here. Do you believe they should be legislation to protect people from religious discrimination certain areas of public life of on the Barons of their religious belief or activity. This will include protecting people who don't hold a religious belief. Well, it's kind of hard to argue with that, but it's sort of what it doesn't say and how the devil the pun intended the devils in the detail. Then it says we currently have a sex age, racial discrimination act. You think it's also important to have a religious Discrimination Act as well.

We also have a disability Discrimination Act so that there's a bit of a tricky one, but then we get two part. Question, 3, do you support the religious discrimination legislative package? That is currently before the Parliament and on it goes. So make sure you keep going. Do you believe parents should be able to send children and choose to send children to a choice School of their choice which aligns with their religious values. Well, is that a loaded question? Possibly should parents shouldn't

It's do what's right for their child. Do you believe that religious schools should require all students to practice their religion affiliated with this this school. If the requirement is necessary to avoid injury to the religious susceptibilities of people of that religion, what about the people who aren't do you believe schools, hospitals, aged care facilities? Accommodation disability. Service providers, should be be able to preference. The hiring the staff of the same religious beliefs so long. As this is in accordance with a publicly available written policy. Well, what if you are religious and you can't Get the stuff. I mean, the Jewish population is .4 of one percent of the population. If you're a Jewish service provider, why would you want to do it? Religious charity should be able to preference persons who share their religious beliefs would making employment decisions. Religious people comfortable should be, would be comfortable to share their beliefs in public life without the religious discrimination Bill. Well, it seems a lot of fundamentalist Christians are, so they are at the moment. Do you believe it should be lawful to make a statement of beliefs?

Only has made his good faith and not malicious, threatening intimidating or harassing. And who decides what that is according to her to what circumstances. And finally it says should the committee choose to publish anonymized representative sample. The response is due to Greed apart of all of your responses being published and then it asks for your details. So it's I think that's it. I have to go with my gut. I feel that's pretty push polling to use the term loaded questions. Call it what you will.

But obviously, the critical one is that one about the religious. Yeah, sort of the bill, the package in its current form, which is clearly doubtful. So that's one inquiry and that's the joint select inquiry and then we have this one, the Senate legal and constitutional Affairs inquiry which doesn't give us a lot of information and it's just as for inquiry and report by the 4th of February 22 on this.

Eleven page. I'll put these links into the podcast link for today and Apologies, by the way, for some podcast issues last week, but it is last week's is up there now, and it just says contact the Secretariat. So, it doesn't really say how the inquiry is going to work at this stage. Now, the timing is obviously not great people of pretty Cactus to put it mildly after the year that we've had. And obviously for, you know, we're wanting to go on holidays, but we're going to have to deal with this also for quiz.

As in Melbourne, we're coming up to the mid summer season from around mid, January early. February gee wonder if that was time. To swell wouldn't put anything past some people. So really, really problematic, but we will deal with it. Now that yesterday an independent lower house, House of Representatives, MP. Andrew will keep said the bill was dead. I'm not quite sure about that. It's certainly in a critical condition on life support and honoring to that.

Today would have been the 120th birthday for Walt Disney who technically could come back to life. Given that his situation. You could say. This bill is cryogenically frozen for now, but of course, what happens next year, we don't know. Will there be any sitting days in Parliament prior to an election? Which we don't know when the date is for starters. Would it get through, would it be face of constitutional Challenge? And then of course, there is in this first half of 2022. We have a federal election do

Then we'll have to consider that as well. So there's a lot of Buddy. If so, it's certainly in, as I say, a very life support system State at the moment. But well, we could sort of give it the secular burial, what could be a religious burial? Just so long as it doesn't interfere with any one else's beliefs. If we, as I say, fill out that survey and make sure that people who make it clear. They don't like the bill in the current form. Get It Go.

So very important segment spent a bit of time on that one today. Well done in Victoria. Thank you to those Federal politicians who deferred it. I think this phrase that I saw in the media was kicked the can down the road. Well, we have done that now, I suppose but for a little bit but we're gonna have to have do some work on submit submissions, joining organizations, you know, queer communities and other disability organizations, women's organizations and make sure that we get those submissions in

And I will say now be polite and factual and empathic about it. Don't write, we don't want the big, it's running the country or something like that. That's not going to help anyone, you know, Colleen, educate all those sorts of things and we can do it. All right, and of course, next year, will be the year after that because we'll have in Victoria. At least. It'll be a blue moon where we have the federal and Victorian State elections in the same year, will be in South Australia as well. So going to Interesting year next year, but we'll live in the present for the moment and play some more music. We opened up with the classic. Yeah, and as such as I said for formed by Kate soprano and her septet, here's another track from Colin Hays, very recent album. I just don't know what to do with myself. He's album of covers and here's a track by that was originally performed by the Scottish band, Della meet tree and track called driving with the brakes on which aisle.

3cr 855 am 3cr digital, 3C H. Dot org dot. Are you and 3cr On Demand out of the pan with Sally first broadcasting known through one every Sunday afternoon. Thanks for your company and prior to out of the pan. Of course, every week. I forgot to thank the crew from out of the blue for diving deep, for the Marine use every week from 11:30, to noon as they always do and they had interviews about cuttlefish and reminded me of a song by A Great Australian artist. Deborah Conway called Cuttlefish Beach and also about seabirds and reminded me of the story of the sea bird in North. I think it's North American known as a tune that once caught a fish and shared it with a hungry order in the to become quite friendly as a result, which just goes to show that one good, turn deserves an order. I'll just run away now. Anyway, there has been some good news or Um news during the week that is of interest and that a few weeks ago, content, warning for violence and possibly transphobic violence. We don't want to assume that and the person who threw the spray can at kill and medic. Andy Medics daughter has been charged after presenting himself to police so credit for turning yourself in as they say, but so that's finally happened.

And the police have not confirmed whether their crimes politically motivated as stated by alleged by and emetic. And the 20-year old man attended a police station about 2:15 a.m. On Thursday interviewed charged with Reckless recklessly causing injury and discharging a missile and maribyrnong man was bailed to appear before the Melbourne magistrates court on the 29th of April next year. So hit that.

Into your Diaries. So good that he's been caught, will be able to get to the bottom of it. Just hope that the medic family, particularly, obviously, Andre, Andy, and Carolyn all doing well, and moving forward with that. So, just let it update on that one. It's been a big week. I mentioning people such as Grace tame and Brittany Higgins, of course, and this is a, is definitely a low to moderate content morning for mention of sexual violence.

Sexual harassment, the kite Jenkins. Inquiry was released in the last few days into sexual discrimination in Parliament. And the rates are just horrendously Rife. I mean we knew they were going to be bad but you wouldn't have thought though going to be as horrendous as they were and it just shows what a problem that is and it just seems bizarre in this day and age that we would actually have a workplace that was exempt from the these sorts of laws.

And so it's a big issue and, of course, it can affect lots of people. Yes, the majority of people affected our people identifying as women whether sis or trans, but of course, I'm trans and gender diverse people. Lgbti people can also face sexual harassment and yes cisgender men can and none of its of course appropriate you just don't and

Don't do it in the first place. And then if you try and someone says, no will, you know, I know it's a perhaps could be considered cliched but no means, no, just don't and it should be consent and if people, you know, people have appropriate age and agree to something and it's safe, then that's where consent comes in. So, it's good that this reports happen. But of course, the question is, will there be action on it? And now petrol parliament's finished for the year and everyone's going into sort of see

Early season mode in you near as Bob down, would say now what happens to it. Now. The question is, of course, it would be great. If this became an election issue, but the agenda will be set in other areas. But yeah, some people might have caused, we're hearing a lot about the voices of and this is a loose Confederation of Independence. Running in safe liberal seat such as Goldstein currently, held by openly gay man, Tim Wilson.

And other sort of liberal sites following on from the initial success of people within the seed of Indie, who else did Sophie Mirabella, some years ago, and this could be very, very interesting. I think it's an issue they could run with because who know, I mean, I'm the last thing I'm going to claim to be The Suitor for the pathologist ass, apologist. Someone who predicts elections or something like that. And now it's possible that we could end up with a sort of hung Parliament with some of These Independence in there and other Independence, there's climate based Independence as well. And if it ended up with say labor in these Independence, there's a possibility. We might get some progress, who knows so much needed. But as I say, it's about action, now, I think we've had enough reports enough words, enough conversation, and it's a question of who's going to move on it. Now, let's be clear about something. No political party is has the Halo and complete.

However, its head and knowing the complete horns, so to speak. There's good and bad in all political parties and including on all aspects of gender, including trans, and even some parties, that claim to be good on Trans in my opinion. Haven't always got it right? Like going to favor any one party or the other. So there's always room to improve on these things. I hope that at least these recommendations are implemented. Whether as I say, it becomes an election issue or not. Who knows?

There might be other things. Post covid, recovery. And of course, the government's trying to push the get the government out of our Lives approach, which seems thinks is a vote winner. Well, it may be in some parts of the country and possibly not in others. Think it's going to be a very interesting campaign when it happens. It's going to be a lot of local issues coming to it as well. And I think therein lies a clue, perhaps for the lgbtiq. I plus communities on how we can operate. There's my hint for the day, well, prior to

The message is I played the Colin. Hay track written by Dmitry driving with the brakes on. Well, I'm gradually taking the handbrake off and accelerating back into Life As We emerge from lockdowns. And it's so yesterday. I had an errand to do it Victoria Market Queen Victoria market and whilst in, but just having finished the air and just happened to stand there and listen to to a Busca playing. Some wonderful sort of. Well, I'll call it Blues type of stuff. It's a little things like that, I think.

That we've missed of yes, we've missed the big things as per our preferred desired taste whether it's pubs clubs, friends their own household, Gatherings parties, whatever. Sometimes it's those little things we just stop and pause and listen to the music. And I was enjoying this so much that well to quote, an advertising campaign from years ago. I bought the company while not quite no. I bought the CD. Here's some great music from Matt katsas, and it's an album. He recorded in Adelaide.

We just heard from, Matt katsas and from an album called live at the, we T being the Wheatsheaf in Adelaide a venue to the West. Hello to anyone listening, in South Australia, the moment.

Wherever you are, great to have your company. And as I said, heard Matt busking yesterday, outside Queen Victoria market and bought the CD really really enjoyable. Great music good to hear that's called tomorrow. And the next day as a set of mix of his word Renditions and originals and very, very enjoyable stuff. What else is going on? Just to follow up on the sort of long debate about religion. There's two really good articles in May.

Mainstream media today that are worth a mention in the rural Network section of Guardian Australia. There's an article called a new church, why are uniting Reverend is preaching to anglicans in a couple's home? And this is how a couple Peter Grace and Peter Sanders disagreed, with the conservative angliss, anglicanism of their armor, Dale diocese. So they left and took the whole congregation with them. They bought the company. I want some of these values that lawn twice in the same sect in the same show.

And I couldn't because they're a guy, couple 1, Peter Sanders was musical director and organist and pedigrees had an unpaid leadership role on a small committee. And they weren't in the right State of Grace. So they left and sort of took the whole congregation with them. In seriousness. It says, leaving a church isn't easy grieving and loss or words used to describe the experience. And if you've it's been a big emotional part of you, then that's perfectly true. Let's just say, if I've had to deal with losing.

A big part of me over the last few months and it's not been easy. Not sure why I'm here to be perfectly honest. That's why I've been driving with the brakes on but they've moved on and and so they are now have found their own church. And so they've got their whole congregation. They've now someone stitched a cloth for the Altar and it just goes to show that.

Really? Why do we discriminate against people when they're adding so much value? And now that church in Armour, Dale's lost two, talented people and they've gone somewhere else and just this is the thing that always gets me, you can sit around until I've got to write have a Viewpoint. Why have a Viewpoint? If it puts people down. I suppose if it's not coming from a real place of kindness and compassion. Why bother? So that's my

Is my sermon for the day? Haha. And I just don't see the point. Also a really good article by Ellen Fanning respected Australian or interviewer and media person. I'm in the guardian today on. Is it an acceptance that politics is a game for it, feeding weary cynicism about the whole exercise of democracy, and Ellen, talks about how she was on a panel where another panelist said, Scott Morrison has one job. That job is

Is to win the next election and Helen goes me. You serious panelists. Year course me. He's the Prime Minister of Australia. You say his only job is to win the next election. Well, I'd agree with that sort of thinking I mean, is doesn't someone in that position? Have to do something remotely resembling leadership rather than just holding the job, maybe people are wanting leadership and that's the people will elect, who knows? And so it's a very interesting thing.

We just don't seem to have that and how leadership has been dumbed down on the last good article, which is certainly in the tree version of today's age is the extended conversation on the religious discrimination build a bill that could pardon and runs from page 27 through twenty eight nine, and it's very well explained. It is called an explainer and there's one paragraph in here that I'll read out from Liam, elphic an associate lecturer of law at Monash University said,

The bill was a challenge to the bipartisan understanding, since the early 1980s that Federal discrimination laws should sit side-by-side with state laws. Quote. It's a drastic overreach from the federal government and not seen in the last 40 Years of discrimination laws in this country, which is pretty much as long as we've had it. So I think that just about sums it up that this isn't over eat. The bill is an overreach and hopefully it will go down and will not override State. And

Three Laws and thing is, as I mentioned earlier, if it did manage to get through Parliament, at some point in its current form. My strong guess is it would be you know, there'd be a constitutional challenge before. It could be implemented and goodness knows what else. So there it is. As I say, get those hit that survey eyes are so put the links to that inquiry and the survey and wineries.

And Survey in and keep checking in on what you can do as an individual and or an organization, get your organization writing if they are say religious. Sorry. I thought some sort of service provider for example, aged care. And otherwise things could go backwards in my, in my personal opinion and well, it's road. We've got a travel here is G. Connors talking about this from an awesome, four CD set.
